WASHINGTON TIMES SPORTS

PLAN FOR SERIES GETS HEARING TONIGHT AT SANDLOT MEETING

By R. D. THOMAS.

An intersectional series, in which each section of the city would have representative teams, will be suggested at tonight's meeting in The Washington Times sports department at 8 o'clock, called for the purpose of determining what method the sandlotters will employ this season in deciding the city independent championships. Every independent sandlotter in town is invited to attend. The Times sports department is on the twelfth floor of the Munsey building.

Three popular forms of competition have been suggested. Some favor a city series on the order of last year's, but starting in midsummer. Others would organize several leagues, and still others take kindly to the intersectional scheme. This latter has at least one advantage that is likey to appeal strongly. It would save much precious time, that time taken up in traveling long distances to the playing field.

Father Moore, of Holy Name, is a strong proponent of the intersectional Demand in Mexico For series. He believes it would be practical to group the teams in each section of the city in separate series and then let the winners fight it out for the titles in intersectional games. Each section would have its midget, junior and unlimited class.

Many games were cut short last season by falling darkness, especial-ly in those instances where teams were forced to travel across the city to reach the diamond. If the intersectional plan were adopted this trouble and loss of time would be obviated. The time problem is put over a big project. In its drive for funds the club is using the slogan: "We are boosting Georgetown—why not boost us." And if the truth be told, the Knickerbocker have done much boosting for the west end. For several years they have had one of the most progressive athletic organizations in the city, and have attracted many people to their baseball and football sames in the old Georgetown hollow. They have done much to boost sandlot sports in Washington, and have given a helping hand to many worthy causes. By playing exhibition games the Knickerbockers have helped to raise money for the Cas ualty Hospital, Friends of Irish m, Friendship House, the National Catholic Community House and others.

They are helping now to make stronger men of Georgetown's boys by fostering the Knickerbocker juniors, youngsters ranging in are from twelve to sixten years who are not members of the Knick-erbocker organization. NEWSPAPER BOWLING CHAMP DEFENDS CROWN TOMORROW

By R. D. THOMAS. Ethelbert F. Cahoon, otherwise known as "Bubbles," and distinguished mong bowlers as the champion of Washington newspapermen, will begin the defense of his title tomorrow afternoon at the Recreation in the first round of the newspapermen's annual elimination tournament. Cahoon's road is likely to prove a rocky one, although his most stuboorn foeman last year, Dave McCarthy, of the Evening Star, failed to show much class in games rolled yesterday. Dave shot a 299 set, but this wasn't as good as could have been expected of the veteran.

FIT FOR CORNELL MEET

ITHACA, N. Y., March 8 .- Although trials for places on the Cornell team, which will compete in the indoor intercollegiates in New York Saturday, are scheduled for today, Jack Moakley has pretty well determined on the men who will carry the burden for the Ithacans. The athletes who starred in the Penn State meet last Saturday night will constitute the bulk of the Red and White strength. The fine performance of David Kimball in defeating both Barron and Hills the Penn State burdless was both the 75 ward low was and Hile, the Penn State hurdlers, over both the 75-yard low and 75-yard high hurdles stamps him as one of the most promising hurdlers Moakley has had in several years. Whether he will be able to duplicate his feat against Barron again is a question that only the meet can solve, but there is no question that this sophomore is destined to become a big factor in collegiate meets of the next few

Another sophomore surprise is Kirby, the sophomore miler, who put up such a great race against Larry Shields in the mile run. Shields beat him by just a yard tul if he will come through in time which was going some under all the for Saturday.

Kirby was not more than two-fifth second behind him, and a mark of 4:22 for a youngster is considered pretty good. The Cor-nell flash lacks experience, and against older runners he will be at a disadvantage, but after a few more races he is likely to be able to take care of himself.

Nick Carter's work in the half mile—he covered the eight laps here in 1:58 4-5—indicates that he is rap-idly rounding into form and will be a dangerous man. The improved running of Cook also pleases the Ithacans. Robert Brown, the intercollegiate champion in the two-mile run, is stepping some these days, but he has his hands full beging Norman Brown, his running mate. Robert covered the attention laps here last Saturday in 9:38, which was good going considering the number of turns. sidering the number of turns.
